CHICAGO, April 22, 2014 - Littelfuse, Inc., the global leader in circuit protection, was recently recognized with a Supplier of the Year Award (circuit protection devices) from one of the company's strategic channel providers, Arrow Electronics, Inc.. Gordon Hunter, Littelfuse CEO, was present to accept the award from MM Natarajan, Arrow's vice president for South Asia, Australia and New Zealand, at a ceremony held in the Singapore office for Arrow's Global Components office. In accepting the award, Hunter noted, "Everyone at Littelfuse is honored to be recognized for our contributions to Arrow through our continuing support for their sales team. I'm particularly grateful to receive this award because it speaks to the excellent communication and strong alliance our two companies have been striving to build in this region."

Simon Yu, president of Arrow's components business in the Asia-Pacific region, noted, "The award is a testament to the tremendous efforts and commitment by both Littelfuse and Arrow in bringing to market some of the most innovative and advanced circuit protection products and solutions. From design engineering to integration services, and from post-manufacturing to logistics and supply chain, Arrow is committed to providing our customers with industry-leading, distinctive market solutions to fuel their innovation. We congratulate Littelfuse on winning this well-deserved recognition, and we look forward to our continued mutual success in years to come."
