AMERICAN AIRLINES GIVES BACK ON GIVING TUESDAY MATCHING UP TO 3 MILLION MILES

FORT WORTH, Texas – American Airlines is giving back today, #GivingTuesday, in a big way by matching customer AAdvantage mileage donations to its Charitable Mileage program through Miles for Kids in Need, Miles of Hope and Miles for All Who Serve. American will match up to one million miles per program, for a total of 3 million miles.

"Our customers are always looking for ways to support the efforts we hold close to our hearts -- helping children in need, serving our nation's heroes and bringing resources and educational opportunities to underserved populations throughout the world," said American's Ron Defeo, vice president – Global Communications. "This year we are excited to participate in #GivingTuesday and help bring additional resources to these worthy causes."

Every mile matters. As little as 1,000 miles can make all the difference to organizations like the American Red Cross and UNICEF, working to supply the basic needs of our most vulnerable populations; a child in need of a critical surgery, a family hit by natural disaster, or a veteran who needs to travel for treatment.

Join American in causes that matter most by donating unused miles to Miles for Kids in need, Miles of Hope and Miles for All Who Serve. Visit aa.com/donate to get started.
