On AMT Day, we say thank you

5/24/2017

The men and women in Tech Ops work tirelessly behind the scenes to provide the safe and reliable aircraft that American Airlines needs to connect people and unite the world. With more than 14,000 team members, our maintenance group is the largest department in our Tech Ops organization. And each year on May 24, National Aviation Maintenance Technician (AMT) Day, we like to take a moment to celebrate them and the hard work they do to maintain the safety of all aircraft.

We have the best AMTs in the business and are so thankful for what they do every single day. “Our customers and your colleagues do not question the safety of our aircraft when they step onboard. That is a reflection of you and the pride you take in your profession. You have our thanks, as well as those by many more within American Airlines,” said David Seymour, senior vice president – Integrated Operations. See American Airlines share their thanks with our Tech Ops team.
