

Phoenix

In Dec. 2013, American Airlines and US Airways created the largest airline in the world. And we've been busy ever since.

Our bustling PHX hub connects travelers throughout the Western and Midwestern United States. Take a look at a few of the things we've been up to in the Valley of the Sun over the last five years.

1

Connecting the mountains to the world. Since the merger, American has added 21 new markets out of Phoenix and we anticipate our first direct flight to Europe with the inaugural London Heathrow flight in March 2019.

4

Playoffs? Are you talking about playoffs? We were the Official Airline of the 2016 College Football Playoff National Championship at University of Phoenix Stadium in Glendale, Arizona. American team members volunteered throughout the week to help with game-related events.

2

Re-freshening up. With a total investment of over $70 million, we've refreshed spaces in Phoenix – from charging tables to new seating to nearby office buildings – that team members and customers can enjoy.

5

Testing, testing... PHX has been the first hub to test out new technology upgrades that were later rolled out systemwide, including BOSS, PRIME and ROVR.

3

Calling all pitchers and catchers. In 2015, we signed a long-term Legacy Partnership with the Chicago Cubs, adding a second American Airlines-sponsored team to the Arizona Cactus League spring training roster.

The PHX Admirals Club was one of the first lounges renovated after the merger.
