Cboe Global Markets Begins Rollout of Options on 11 Select Sector Indices Published by S&P

- Cboe launches options on the Materials Select Sector Index today, February 7; plans to follow with options on the remaining 10 Select Sector Indices
- New index options expected to hold particular appeal for European investors seeking targeted exposure to U.S. equity sectors
- Expands Cboe's suite of products tied to S&P Indices; trading, settlement similar to Cboe's S&P 500 Index options (SPX)

CHICAGO – February 7, 2019 – Cboe Global Markets, Inc. (Cboe: CBOE) today began the rollout of options on 11 Select Sector Indices that comprise a sub-index of the S&P 500® Index, a key U.S. equities benchmark, further expanding Cboe's suite of products tied to S&P Indices.

Select Sector options are designed to provide investors with an easy way to add exposure to particular U.S. industry sectors to their portfolios. The new options are expected to have particular utility for investors seeking an alternative to options on exchange-traded funds (ETFs), including European customers seeking an alternative due to certain European regulations. Select Sector options also offer investors the benefits of cash settlement and European-style exercise, similar to Cboe's S&P 500 Index (SPX) options.

Cboe Options Exchange kicked off the rollout today with the launch of options on the Materials Select Sector Index. The planned rollout schedule and index and options symbols for the remaining options are as follows:
