Newtown, PA - March 4, 2015 - EPAM (NYSE:EPAM) has been included as a strong performer in "The Forrester Wave(TM): B2B Global Commerce Service Providers, Q1 2015" report. EPAM was included among the top 11 vendors that Forrester evaluated for this report. The 77 evaluation criteria included scores for current offering, strategy and market presence.

According to the Forrester report, Strong Performers, including EPAM "have an opportunity to break through in the next few years and challenge Leader Global Commerce Service Providers by doing B2B digital transformation work that goes beyond either mostly technology transformation or customer experience work. The report also states that "EPAM excels at product and project management, system design and architecture, and testing services. EPAM's clients spoke at length about the firm's commitment to partnership, repeatedly mentioning its reliability and technical competence."

"EPAM's in-depth industry expertise in Financial Services, Retail and Distribution, Travel and Hospitality, Media and Entertainment and Healthcare and Life Sciences, combined with world-renowned technology leadership allows us to address our clients' challenges by delivering integrated business and technology solutions", said Arkadiy Dobkin, EPAM CEO and President. Mr. Dobkin continued, "Being named a strong performer in this evaluation, as well as the inclusion as a primary agile services player in the December, 2014 Forrester report: "Market Overview: Agile Development Service Providers", validates, in our opinion, our unique approach to our commerce go-to-market strategy and underscores our 20-year commitment to the highest standards of product and solution engineering."

Following acquisitions of Empathy Lab in 2012 and Great Fridays in 2014, EPAM's core capabilities in product development have been extended to include a robust set of digital and design services. This integration has created an opportunity to bring an enhanced value proposition to customers in the B2B sphere and provides a level of partnership with customers that clearly stands out as a key strength in the report.
