JetBlue's Boston Expansion Continues: Now Flying to Aruba and San Diego

Now Offering 27 Nonstop Destinations From Boston's Logan, Including More Cities in California Than Any Other Airline

BOSTON, June 28, 2007 (PRIME NEWSWIRE) -- JetBlue Airways (Nasdaq:JBLU), the fastest-growing airline at Boston's Logan International Airport, this week kicks off another round of expansion with the launch of service to two new cities: San Diego and Aruba. The award-winning low-fare, low-cost airline's newest service to California begins today while its new Caribbean service starts Saturday, June 30. JetBlue now offers its affordable fares and friendly service to 27 nonstop destinations from its Boston focus city.

JetBlue will operate one daily nonstop flight to San Diego and one weekly nonstop flight, on Saturdays, to Aruba. Beginning November 5, flights to Aruba will expand to operate three-times weekly -- on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays. JetBlue also offers daily connecting service between Boston and Aruba year-round via New York.

"Just in time for summer vacation, we're adding nonstop service to two of our customers' most sought-after destinations," said Marty St. George, Boston native and JetBlue's Vice President of Network Planning. "Whether you're headed to the Caribbean, to California, or anywhere in between, JetBlue gets you there in style and without breaking the bank."

From its recently renovated home at Terminal C, JetBlue offers low-fare, high-quality service to an ever-expanding roster of destinations in the United States, Aruba, the Bahamas, Bermuda, and Mexico, including the most California destinations served nonstop from Logan. In addition, connecting service operated by JetBlue's marketing partner, Cape Air, is available through Boston for customers traveling between San Diego and Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket, Provincetown, and Hyannis, MA.
