Additionally, customers can text the word OCEAN to 20222 to make a $5 donation to the National Aquarium in support of their global efforts to improve the health of the aquatic world (d). The airline is committed to creating strong corporate partnerships in the communities it serves, supporting the passion points that matter most to customers living and working in the local area.

"JetBlue offers the most nonstop destinations from Boston than any other carrier, and we are happy to complement our existing service from The Hub to the D.C.-area with four new daily flights to Baltimore, the 57th destination in our route network," said Robin Hayes, JetBlue's executive vice president and chief commercial officer. "We are in the business of giving customers more than the other guys, including a first checked bag, free snacks and drinks, the most legroom in coach and more free live entertainment - all without a fee. And we are also in the business of giving more back to the communities we serve, which is why we're pleased to announce our support today of the National Aquarium."

"As a non-profit organization, the National Aquarium counts on corporate support from a like-minded organization like JetBlue to help us expand our conservation education work," said Brigid Ferraro, Director of Partnership Marketing. "We are grateful for Jet Blue's support as they expand their presence in the Baltimore community."

"We are pleased to welcome JetBlue Airways to BWI Marshall Airport," said Timothy L. Campbell, A.A.E., Executive Director of the Maryland Aviation Administration. "This new service to Boston will provide both business and leisure travelers with more travel options, competitive fares, and excellent customer satisfaction."

About the National Aquarium

The National Aquarium, with venues in Baltimore, Maryland, and Washington, DC, is home to more than 14,000 animals representing more than 600 species, weighing as much as 500 pounds or as little as the weight of a paper clip. Through exhibits, interactions, programs and events, the National Aquarium provides transforming experiences that spark action and drive people to make conservation a part of their daily actions. Conservation education is at the heart of the National Aquarium's mission. Children all around the region benefit from classroom instruction, outreach visits to schools, free school group visits and on-site demonstrations, internships, program scholarships, and youth employment, as well as experiential excursions like sea turtle counts and wetland restoration projects. The many thousands of students touched by the National Aquarium's education programs make emotional connections that create lasting enthusiasm for the environment. The National Aquarium is also a global leader in aquatic conservation from Costa Rica to the Chesapeake Bay, and continues to increase public awareness of environmental issues, inspire stewardship behaviors, and provide citizens with the tools to become active environmental leaders in their communities. The Aquarium has also adopted green practices that put these priorities into practice in Aquarium buildings and programs.
