"Our growing presence in New York, Boston, and San Juan has positioned us to take advantage of important partnership opportunities," said Robin Hayes, JetBlue's Chief Commercial Officer. "This ability leverages our jetblue.com platform to drive even more benefit from our interline partnerships, while adding tremendous advantages to our customer, with more options and flexibility."

For years, JetBlue's website has made it easy for customers to book travel anywhere within the JetBlue network in just a few clicks. With this website enhancement, JetBlue is expanding the geographic reach of the site, allowing customers to book travel from within the JetBlue network to new international markets in Europe, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean - still with just a few easy clicks (a).

Aer Lingus

"Today's announcement marks the continued development of Aer Lingus' partnership with JetBlue, with a focus on providing customers with increased options from more U.S. markets to Ireland and other European destinations," said Jack Foley, Aer Lingus' Executive Vice President, North America. "Moreover, it reaffirms Aer Lingus' commitment to providing low fares access for customers from new markets across the U.S."

Now both jetblue.com and aerlingus.com, successful partners since 2008, offer customers the option to purchase tickets that include space on both carriers. Customers can fly from points within the JetBlue network to Boston or JFK, connect to Aer Lingus' transatlantic service to Ireland, and then to over a dozen destinations across Europe.

American Airlines

"Our successful partnership with JetBlue has given our customers more travel options and has allowed us to grow in new markets," said Virasb Vahidi, American's Chief Commercial Officer. "With this new milestone of selling our tickets on each other's website, our customers will benefit more from the strong networks of both airlines."

Now, an American customer can buy AA tickets at jetblue.com, and a JetBlue customer can purchase JetBlue tickets at aa.com - giving customers of both carriers new sales channels from which to purchase tickets. The two carriers launched their partnership in March 2010 with an enhanced interline agreement, slot exchange and employee travel program.To date, the carriers have added new interline routes, instituted benefits to members of both carriers' frequent flier programs and, with today's announcement, allow customers to buy tickets on each others websites. Bookings are available to and from any of the 26 domestic JetBlue cities, and the 15 international American Airlines cities that are included in the carriers' interline agreement. Furthermore, TrueBlue members are now able to rack up points on American's flights between New York's Kennedy Airport and Barcelona, Spain; Brussels, Belgium; Buenos Aires, Argentina; London, England; Madrid, Spain; Manchester, England; Milan, Italy; Paris, France; Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Rome, Italy; Sao Paulo, Brazil; Tokyo (Narita), Japan; Tokyo (Haneda), Japan; and Zurich, Switzerland, as well as American's new non-stop service to Budapest, Hungary. Customers flying or connecting through Boston can also earn points when flying to London, England and Paris, France.

Cape Air

"The timing is perfect," said Cape Air President Dave Bushy. "As our busy summer season approaches on Cape Cod and the Islands, as well as the Caribbean and Florida, the ease of booking the entire trip on-line, with direct baggage transfers, is a huge convenience for our passengers."

Cape Air was JetBlue's first airline partner dating back to 2007 when JetBlue began to market and sell Cape Air flights between Boston and Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard, Provincetown, Hyannis and Rutland, Vermont under a codeshare agreement. Today's announcement of the interline capabilities of jetblue.com will provide customers with access to an expanded list of destinations in Cape Air's Northeast U.S. network, as well as to its Caribbean network via San Juan, P.R. and to Key West, Florida via Fort Myers.

Other Interline Partners

JetBlue has interline agreements in place with six other airlines: EL AL Israel Airlines, Emirates, LAN Airlines, Lufthansa, South African Airways, and Virgin Atlantic Airways. Although customers cannot yet use jetblue.com to book tickets that include space on those airlines, it expects to add more partners to the website over the coming year.
