New Flight Schedules Between Florida Focus Cities and Mexican Capital Better Meets Needs of Nonstop and Connecting Travelers

Fort Lauderdale and Orlando Routes Will Each Be Flown Twice Daily – Up From Current Once Daily Service

NEW YORK--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- JetBlue (NASDAQ:JBLU) today announced new and improved flight schedules for service between Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport (FLL) and Mexico City International Airport (MEX) and between Orlando International Airport (MCO) and the Mexican capital, which will better accommodate the airline's customers. Additionally, JetBlue will increase service to four daily roundtrips between Mexico City and the U.S. – two on the Fort Lauderdale route and two on the Orlando route. Seats are on sale now and JetBlue is celebrating with a special introductory fare of just $99 one-way (a).

"Our ability to now offer Mexico City service twice daily with improved flight times between these two growing Florida focus cities positions JetBlue for even greater success in one of the most important major markets in the Americas," said John Checketts, vice president network planning, JetBlue. "It's a win for customers on each end of these routes."

JetBlue first landed in Mexico City in 2015 with one daily roundtrip flight from each of its Florida focus cities. While the airline has quickly become a favorite among Mexico City travelers who love JetBlue's award-winning service and low fares, the original flight times could not accommodate all customers' schedule needs and did not align well with a portion of connecting traffic.

However, earlier this year, JetBlue was awarded new flight times and the authority to operate additional service by the U.S. Department of Transportation when the agency required other airlines to divest slots at MEX in order to enhance competition in Mexico City.

The enhancements in Mexico City service help JetBlue grow in several key areas. In Fort Lauderdale, where JetBlue is the top airline serving more than 60 nonstop destinations, it advances growth plans to reach 140 daily flights in the coming years. In Orlando, the expanded service grows JetBlue's other Florida focus city where it operates up to 70 daily flights to nearly 30 destinations. Lastly, JetBlue's growth in the broader Latin America and Caribbean network continues to make up nearly a third of the airline's flying capacity. JetBlue will operate up to 315 daily flights in the region this year.
