

Progressive Names Steve Broz Chief Information Officer

January 29, 2016

MAYFIELD VILLAGE, OHIO - January 29, 2016 - The Progressive Corporation (PGR) today announced Steve Broz as its new Chief Information Officer following the previously announced retirement of Ray Voelker. Voelker retired after 30 years at Progressive, including 15 as Chief Information Officer.

Broz was as a key member of Voelker's senior leadership team heading up the technology group's Enterprise Project Management Office. During his 15 years at Progressive, Broz also has spent time in Customer Experience, Claims Process and Personal Lines.

"I want to thank Ray for his exemplary leadership during his 30 years with Progressive. He was a valuable member of my team and helped Progressive transform many of the ways we offer insurance and connect with our customers," said Glenn Renwick, Chairman of the Board, President and CEO of Progressive. "Throughout his tenure at Progressive, Steve has consistently shown the type of leadership, values and intellect that will enable him to effectively lead our IT organization and continue to execute our agenda of becoming consumers' number one choice for insurance. I am delighted to have him join our Senior Leadership Team."

Steve received his bachelor's degree from Princeton University and his master's from the Darden Graduate School of Business Administration at The University of Virginia.
