Rambus Participates in National Rebuilding Day

Volunteers Join Rebuilding Together Peninsula (RTP) To Assist Local Community

LOS ALTOS, Calif., Apr 21, 2010 (BUSINESS WIRE) -- On Saturday, April 24, 2010, thousands of volunteers from local service organizations and corporations will join forces to rehabilitate homes and community facilities around the Bay Area as part of Rebuilding Together Peninsula's National Rebuilding Day. To support the country's economic rebuilding process, volunteers extend their generosity to assist low-income families and nonprofit facilities to repair and restore their properties.

For the ninth consecutive year, volunteers from Rambus will join Rebuilding Together Peninsula (RTP) to donate their time, energy and talents to help the local community. Striving for better quality of life for less fortunate families in the San Francisco peninsula, Rambus employees will assist in a revitalizing a house with landscaping, painting, and carpentry projects.

"Our organization's goal is to help neighbors in need to live in safety, warmth, and independence while also providing a positive volunteer experience for local partners," said Seana O'Shaughnessy, executive director of Rebuilding Together Peninsula. "Contributions from companies like Rambus, a long-term supporter of our projects, give us the opportunity to make a difference in the lives of many families. In 2010, we are working on 54 homes and 26 community facilities, the most in our 21-year history."

Rambus volunteers, along with Rebuilding Together Peninsula and community leaders will support the National Rebuilding Day on Saturday, April 24 at 8:00am, on the project site located at 770 2nd Avenue Redwood City-CA. Photos and interview opportunities are available throughout the day.

About Rebuilding Together Peninsula

Rebuilding Together Peninsula (RTP) is a nonprofit organization that builds volunteer partnerships to rehabilitate homes and community facilities for low-income people-elderly, disabled, and families-so they can live in warmth, safety and independence. Serving all of San Mateo and northern Santa Clara County, RTP provides more free major home repairs than any other peninsula organization and is the only one to provide free roof repair and replacement services. With the help of nearly 75,000 volunteers, RTP has restored 1200 homes and community facilities with an estimated reconstruction value over $30,000,000. RTP is an affiliate to the national Rebuilding Together network, which is responsible for over 10,000 repair projects across the United States each year.
