Adjusted free cash flow conversion is calculated by dividing the Company's current quarter adjusted free cash flow by Non-GAAP net income. We believe adjusted free cash flow conversion is a useful measure in providing investors with information regarding the Company's ability to convert profits into cash and is a widely accepted measure. Adjusted free cash flow is calculated as operating cash flow for the quarter less net capital expenditures adding back cash collections of deferred purchase price and certain receivables sold to certain financial institutions under a customer's supplier financing program in the second quarter of fiscal 2020 that subsequently qualified for operating cash flow treatment per GAAP in the third quarter of fiscal year 2020. In addition, it includes collection of the deferred purchase price receivables which the Company repurchased as part of the ABS program amended in the third quarter of fiscal year 2020 (refer to our summary financials published on our company website for additional details). Adjusted free cash flow also excludes impacts related to certain vendor programs that is required for GAAP.

Non-GAAP net income excludes certain amounts that are included in the most directly comparable measures under GAAP including stock-based compensation expense, intangible amortization, restructuring charges, customer related asset impairments, tax adjustments and certain other charges. Adjusted free cash flow conversion is a non-GAAP financial measure and may not be defined and calculated by other companies in the same manner.
