Covalon Announces Third Quarter Fiscal 2023 Results

MISSISSAUGA, Ontario – August 16, 2023 – (BUSINESS WIRE) – Covalon Technologies Ltd. (the "Company" or "Covalon") (TSXV: COV; OTCQX: CVALF), an advanced medical technologies company, today announced its third quarter fiscal 2023 results.

Brian Pedlar, Covalon's President and CEO, said, "I am pleased to announce another strong financial quarter for Covalon. Revenue for the three months ended June 30, 2023, increased 39% to $6.3 million versus prior year and we've also seen improvements to our gross margins during the quarter. We are in a much stronger position in our key markets compared to last year, and we are seeing the results of investments made in 2022 continue to positively impact us in 2023. With our strong product and technology portfolio, Covalon is focused on becoming the leading provider of compassionate care solutions that help patients heal faster and live better. We are on track with our growth plan, and we have made strong progress in the first nine months of 2023 towards reaching our goals.

"Over the past year the Company has transformed its strategy to focus on growing its United States and international infection prevention and wound care business by building technology and brand awareness with clinicians and customers. This is being accomplished through the Company's portfolio of consumable medical device dressings that are sold to hospitals, long-term care facilities, clinics, and home healthcare providers directly by the Company's sales team and through distribution partners. Historically the Company has also offered services to large medical companies utilizing Covalon's medical coating technology, which represents approximately 3% of the Company's revenue this quarter. This portion of Covalon's business is resource intensive and is not in line with the Company's focus on manufacturing and selling consumable medical devices. As a result, the Company has decided to transition away from medical coating projects and instead focus its business strategy on the Company's core business verticals. Contributing to the Company's decision to shift away from the medical coating business is the fact that its largest development services customer has been unable to meet its internal deadlines over the past several years, which has resulted in unpredictable revenues, unpredictable staffing requirements, and significant increased costs for staff and facilities for Covalon, that has prevented Covalon from scaling its development services business. As a result of the negative impacts on Covalon, the Company spent a considerable amount of effort over the past year to renegotiate with the customer so as to be fairly reimbursed by the customer. In response, the Company was notified that this customer has determined to not proceed with its medical coating projects for now and accordingly, Covalon does not anticipate continuing to derive development services revenue under the current projects.

"Our efforts to grow our customer base in the United States and strengthening our brand world-wide have led to significant growth in revenue over the first nine months of this fiscal year. Revenue for the nine months was up 54% to $19.7 million compared to 2022. We continue to engage with major hospitals in the United States that are evaluating and implementing our infection prevention products in their intensive care units. We have seen positive impacts in our product sales through our distributors in the United States, and increased orders from our international channels. Even with our decision to transition away from our medical device coatings projects, we anticipate continued growth in revenue this year compared to 2022.

"Gross margins were significantly improved in the first nine months of 2023. As part of the Company's customer focus initiatives, we improved our supply chain operations and invested in upgrading both business systems and infrastructure. Additional ongoing investments include expanding Covalon's inhouse manufacturing, which will allow us to better serve our customers and drive growth in key markets going forward. The full positive impact on our margins from our supply chain improvement initiatives are expected to be further realized over time.

"We continue to align our operating costs to growth prospects, as we see the results of our improved sales and marketing initiatives and as we realize the benefits of our efforts to transform our supply chain. Operating costs from continuing operations for the quarter ended June 30, 2023, increased 13% over the same period last year. Our team is executing on deliberate and well-planned strategic decisions to reposition Covalon to be able to unlock value from our lifesaving, patented products and technology by investing in our people, our commercial capabilities, and our infrastructure. We are confident that the changes we have made to Covalon will allow us to consistently achieve our objectives.

"The momentum we have, and the certainty of purpose we have in our products and mission, will allow Covalon to succeed. This quarter demonstrates that we are moving in the right direction with respect to investments made last year in several key business areas, including sales and marketing, operations, and IT infrastructure. We are excited about our progress in transforming Covalon into a patient-driven medical device company, built on the relentless pursuit to help the most vulnerable patients have a better chance at healing," concluded Mr. Pedlar.

Non-IFRS Financial Measures

This press release makes reference to certain non-IFRS measures. These measures are not recognized or defined measures under IFRS, do not have standardized meaning prescribed by IFRS and are therefore unlikely to be comparable to similar measures presented by other companies. Rather, these measures are provided as additional financial information to complement those IFRS measures by providing further understanding of our results of operations from management's perspective. Accordingly, these measures should not be considered in isolation or as a substitute for analysis of our financial information reported under IFRS. The non-IFRS financial measures, adjustments, and reasons for adjustments should be carefully evaluated as these measures have limitations as analytical tools and should not be used in substitution for an analysis of the Company's results under IFRS. We use non-IFRS measures including "Adjusted Gross Margin" and "Adjusted EBITDA" to provide investors with supplemental measures of our operating performance and thus highlight trends in our core business that may not otherwise be apparent when relying solely on IFRS measures. We believe that securities analysts, investors and other interested parties frequently use non-IFRS measures in the evaluation of issuers. Our management also uses non-IFRS measures in order to facilitate operating performance comparisons from period to period, to prepare annual operating budgets and forecasts and to determine components of management compensation. The following non-IFRS financial measures are presented in this news release, and a description of the calculation for each measure is included below:

- Adjusted Gross Margin is defined as gross profit before operating expenses, plus depreciation and amortization included in cost of sales, plus inventory provision amounts.
- Adjusted EBITDA is defined as net loss, plus interest expense, plus depreciation and amortization, plus stock-based compensation, less government subsidies, plus inventory provisions, plus accounts receivable write-off expenses.

You should also be aware that the Company may recognize income or incur expenses in the future that are the same as, or similar to some of the adjustments in these non-IFRS financial measures. Because these non-IFRS financial measures may be defined differently by other companies in our industry, our definitions of these non-IFRS financial measures may not be comparable to similarly titled measures of other companies, thereby diminishing their utility.

The table below provides a reconciliation of gross profit before operating expenses under IFRS in the consolidated financial statements to Adjusted Gross Margin for the three and nine months ended June 30, 2023 and 2022 Management believes that Adjusted Gross Margin is useful in assessing the performance of the Company's ongoing operations and its ability to generate cash flows from period to period. The adjusting items below are considered to be outside of the Company's core operating results, and these items can distort the trends associated with the Company's ongoing performance, even though some of those expenses may recur.
