AMERICAN AIRLINES TO LAUNCH SERVICE BETWEEN LOS ANGELES AND TOKYO HANEDA IN FEBRUARY 2016

Customers can book travel on the new route starting Sunday

FORT WORTH, Texas – American Airlines will offer customers daily, year-round, nonstop service to Tokyo's Haneda Airport (HND) from its trans-Pacific gateway at Los Angeles International Airport (LAX) beginning Feb. 11, 2016. Customers can book travel on the new route starting Sunday, Nov. 8. American recently secured takeoff and landing time slots at Haneda Airport from the Japanese aviation authorities, which will allow the commencement of the flight.

"It's important for our customers to have direct access to Tokyo Haneda, and we'll be proud to serve this key airport from Los Angeles," said Andrew Nocella, American's chief marketing officer. "This new flight is a fantastic addition to our growing network to Asia and a great complement to our existing service to Tokyo Narita. We thank the Japanese authorities for working with us to find appropriate slot times, and the U.S. Department of Transportation and the State Department for facilitating the process and recognizing the importance of American offering year-round service to Haneda."

The new service will operate on the following daily schedule (all times local):

Arrives at HND at 11 p.m. the following day
