Concrete Jungle to Jungle Gym: American builds a playground

12/2/2016

Can you imagine having nothing but concrete for your school playground? That was the case at Centinela Elementary school in Inglewood, California, near Los Angeles International Airport (LAX). But in November 2016, more than 50 American Airlines volunteers stepped in to help as part of their work on Do Crew — a cadre of employees and retiree volunteers who participate in community-based projects for nonprofits. Do Crew, together with the LAX Regional Council, partnered with an organization that gives back to children in low-income communities, Carter's Kids, to remodel the school's playground. See the complete transformation for yourself in the video below.
