American Airlines to Add 165 Tech Ops Positions in Tulsa

10/31/2019

FORT WORTH, Texas — American Airlines has announced it is hiring an additional 165 aviation maintenance technicians (AMTs) and support positions

FORT WORTH, Texas — American Airlines has announced it is hiring an additional 165 aviation maintenance technicians (AMTs) and support positions in 2019, resulting in more than 1,000 new Tech Ops positions added to the company in 2019. These new jobs underscore American's commitment to operational excellence and performing more maintenance work in-house than any other airline.

The newest positions will be at the airline's maintenance base in Tulsa, Oklahoma called Tech Ops — Tulsa. Tech Ops – Tulsa is the world's largest commercial aviation base maintenance facility and American recently announced 400 new Tech Ops positions to assist with additional work coming to the base.

The new team members, primarily Federal Aviation Administration-licensed mechanics, will focus on interior modifications to Boeing 737-800 and Airbus A321 aircraft to drive operational reliability and create a consistent product across American's fleet.

"The work we do in Tulsa is an important part of maintaining and delivering safe and reliable aircraft for American's customers and team members," said Erik Olund, Managing Director of Base Maintenance for American. "With these additional positions, we'll be situated to provide the best operational performance and consistent experience that our customers expect and deserve."

This year American has added more than 1,000 Tech Ops positions in both frontline team members and support staff, further demonstrating its commitment to ensuring its Tech Ops team is positioned to provide the best service and product for customers and team members. American employs more than 15,000 Tech Ops professionals around the world.

Working for American's Tech Ops team is a rewarding career that offers the opportunity to support the airline's nearly 1,000 mainline aircraft, to be part of a team that values the safety of its customers and team members, and to ensure the reliability of American's product. American offers competitive pay and benefits, including excellent health and flight benefits.
