American Airlines Will Get College Football Fans to the End Zone with More Flights and Seats this Fall

5/13/2022

FORT WORTH, Texas — American Airlines is throwing the penalty flag on connecting flights this fall by adding almost 70 nonstop flights for some of the most popular college football games. The world’s largest airline will also add more seats to destinations throughout the season, connecting more fans to their favorite teams for game day. American currently serves more college cities than any other U.S. carrier.

“American is making it easier for college football fans to get from the gate to the gridiron this fall,” said Jason Reisinger, American’s Managing Director of Global Network Planning. “With new nonstop flights and more seats, we’re helping fans see the action in person. The American team is ready for game day with the youngest mainline fleet of any U.S. network carrier and service that is second to none.”

Get ready for game day with 68 new flights

American is adding 68 new flights this fall for college football fans to get to the field faster.
