American Airlines returns to Haiti with all-Haitian crew, marking 100th destination served in the region

2026-11-01

- American Airlines becomes first major U.S. network carrier to resume flights to Haiti with daily nonstop service between Miami (MIA) and Cap-Haitien (CAP).
- The milestone flight was operated by an all-Haitian, Creole-speaking flight crew.
- The carrier began service to Haiti in 1971, now returning to CAP after more than six years.
- The new service marks the airline's 100th destination in its Caribbean and Latin America network — strengthening American's Miami hub as the world's leading gateway to the region.

MIAMI — American Airlines celebrated the launch of daily nonstop service between Miami (MIA) and Cap-Haitien, Haiti (CAP), restoring the airline's presence in Haiti and marking a historic milestone in the airline's centennial year as the 100th destination served in its Caribbean and Latin America network. The added connection further strengthens the role and connectivity of American's MIA hub, serving as the global gateway to the region.

"As we celebrate American's centennial year, reaching a milestone 100 destinations in the Caribbean and Latin America highlights both our rich history and our unmatched footprint in the region," said American's Vice President of International Operations José A. Freig. "The continued growth of our network in the region — including being the first airline to return to Venezuela earlier this year — is a reflection of the legacy we've built and one we're proud to carry forward as we continue growing our network across the region."

The new route operates daily with American's Boeing 737 aircraft, offering customers convenient access between Miami and Haiti with more than 90 connections across the United States through the airline's MIA hub.

The historic inaugural flight was operated by an all-Haitian, Creole-speaking flight crew led by Captain Oliver Jean, reflecting American's long-standing connection to Haiti and its commitment to delivering a welcoming travel experience for customers.

Momentum in Miami

Miami is American's most internationally connected hub and the world's leading gateway to the Caribbean and Latin America, operating more than 410 peak daily flights to more than 170 destinations across 46 countries.

"The connection between the United States and Haiti is incredibly meaningful, which is especially true in South Florida," said American's Senior Vice President of MIA Operations Juan Carlos Liscano. "We know the critical role air service plays in linking countries and communities, so we're beyond proud to reinstate such a consequential connection for so many. We'll also have our largest-ever schedule out of our Miami hub this winter, and there's no better way to continue our commitment to South Florida than by resuming our Haiti service."

The new service to Haiti adds to American's ongoing momentum at its MIA hub.

- Preparing for growth: Plans are underway for a reimagined Concourse D that will deliver more gates, enhance international operations and elevate the customer experience — building on American's nearly 40-year of history in Miami.
- Expanding premium offerings: New, improved and expanded premium offerings are coming to MIA with an all-new Flagship® lounge and major expansion of the Admirals Club® lounge at D30.
- Winter is coming: American continues to expand options for Miami travelers with its largest-ever winter schedule with increased service on key routes this winter, including service to San Juan, Puerto Rico (SJU); St. Thomas, U.S. Virgin Islands (STT); Antigua (ANU); Tortola, British Virgin Islands (EIS); Exuma, Bahamas (GGT); St. Kitts (SKB); and Rio de Janeiro (GIG).
- Connection to Venezuela: Earlier this year, American became the first to reconnect Venezuela and the United States in seven years with nonstop service between MIA and Caracas (CCS). Since then, American has launched nonstop flights from MIA to Maracaibo (MAR) and announced the airline's first-ever service to Barcelona, Venezuela (BLA), starting Jan. 15, 2027.
- Commitment to community: American continues to invest in the South Florida community with its most recently announced partnership with Inter Miami CF, as well as its extended partnership the Miami HEAT — taking customer and fan experiences to new heights.
